The New Arrhythmia Journal

Serkan Cay, MD*

Dear Readers, Electrophysiologists, and Rhythm Lovers,

After more than 20 years of working in the context of electrophysiology, we have decided to spread knowledge about rhythm disorders through an arrhythmia journal internationally. Beyond performing electrophysiology, ablation, and device implantation procedures, the knowledge about conventional and new procedural techniques, procedural/clinical data of arrhythmia centers as separate and collaborative works, and experimental studies leading to future sights are crucial. As known, there are pretty valuable top-ranked scientific arrhythmia journals that published and spread scientific content periodically around the world. The focused target of our new arrhythmia journal, “Journal of Arrhythmia and Electrophysiology (JAE),” will be to be among these highest-level scientific journals. To achieve this, we need your valuable scientific papers and will be looking for your contribution to JAE. We will do our best.

Best regards,

Prof. Dr. Serkan Cay

On behalf of the JAE Editorial Board
